

ONE COUNTY IN WYOMING MAKES FINE CLEAN-UP OF PRAIRIE DOG TOWNS

A rodent drive in Hat Creek community, Niobrara County, Wyo., recently reported to the Biological Survey of the United States Department of Agriculture, resulted in about half the cooperators ridding their land of every prairie dog, while each of the others had, at the time of reporting, but four or five live rodents left. Not 100 live prairie dogs, it is estimated, are left on this area of about 25,000 acres which was literally alive with them six months ago. The work was started in April on a strip of land 13 miles long and 3 miles wide, with twenty-two ranchers cooperating. Practically every man in the district signed up to do his share of the poisoning. The county appropriated money to be used in purchasing poison for the State and nonresident lands, the Biological Survey furnished poison for the Federal land, and labor was donated by interested residents.

Thirteen hundred pounds of poison was mixed and distributed. The district survey man returned the latter part of May to direct the work, and again in September to check over the results. The project was an isolated part of a 250,000 acre dog town, and upon its successful completion depended next year's cooperation and support for the work in this county. Considering the fact that heretofore no way of caring for the nonresident lands had been devised, the showing in Hat Creek community was considered excellent.

CATTLE TUBERCULOSIS IS NOW ERADICATED IN MANY WHOLE COUNTIES

The most important feature of the tuberculosis-eradication movement continues to be the cleaning up of definite areas, principally counties, according to the United States Department of Agriculture. Reports for June, July, and August show that thirty-one additional counties in ten States have officially adopted the area plan. This brings the total of counties now doing intensive work up to 144. Thirty-nine counties have completed one or more tests.

Of the thirty-one counties that began area work this summer, California, Indiana, Virginia, Tennessee, and Maine have one each, Nebraska, Michigan and Oregon one each, Wisconsin five, and Wyoming twelve.

To date the best example of successful county-wide drive is the one carried on in Steuben County, N. Y. During a period of nineteen days there were tested, by veterinarians, 4,615 lots containing more than 45,000 head of cattle. The disease was found on 486 farms, and 1,574 reactors were removed. The total cost of the campaign in the county was $10,800—about 23.5 cents a head for all animals tested. Ninety-eight per cent of the herds were tested in the drive and the few "conscientious objectors" remaining have decided to have their cattle tested. The great success of the work in this county was due in large measure to the wholehearted cooperation given by the live-stock owners, the Farm Bureau, railroad live-stock agents, women's clubs, the Dairyman's League, breeders' organizations, county commissioners, chamber of commerce, and other organizations.
